YORKSHIRE WIN

VERITY DISMISSES NORTHANTS FOR 89.

Notts Win and Sussex Draw with Lancs.

IDDON'S DOUBLE CENTURY.

Middlesex and Surrey Collapse Badly.

London, Yesterday.

Yorkshire to-day registered their sixth success of the season when they beat Northants by an innings. Verity was again in good form and took 8 for 39 in Northants first innings, which realised only 89 runs. Macaulay, the veteran fast bowler, was dead in the second innings and, bowling unchanged, claimed 7 wickets for 66 runs.

Notts, who are following close on the heels of their northern rivals, easily accounted for the disappointing Gloucestershire eleven when they beat the visitors by 6 wickets at Trent Bridge. Harold Larwood took 6 wickets for 79 runs in the first innings, only "Wally" Hammond (119) withstanding his express deliveries. In Gloucester's second innings Larwood took 5 for 38 to give him a total "bag" of 11 for 117 for the match.

Iddon's Double Century. In a game which was spoiled by rain at Manchester Sussex had to be content with a drawn against Lancashire after scoring 322 for 5 in reply to the home county's useful total of 413. Iddon distinguished himself in this game by scoring 201, his second three-figure innings of the season. Butterworth also reached three figures to score 101. For Sussex K. S. Duleepsinhji, the skipper, scored 111 in a characteristic innings.

Middlesex Collapse. Leicestershire caused a mild sensation when they defeated Middlesex by 3 wickets at Leicester. Commencing their second innings 45 runs in arrears Middlesex collapsed sensationally for 133, thus setting Leicester the task of scoring 89 runs for victory. Leicester, however, only just got home, losing seven wickets before the winning hit was made.

Lee Brothers Score 249. Thanks to F. Lee (140) and J. Lee (109) Somerset were able to amass the huge total of 459 against Essex at Leyton. Hazell followed up by taking 12 wickets for 122 runs to give Somerset victory by an innings and 74 runs. Pope (115) strove hard to give Essex a fighting chance in the first innings, but his effort was unavailing and Essex were forced to follow on 203 runs in arrears.

Surrey Out for 88. The strong Surrey batting side collapsed badly against Derby at Chesterfield and were dismissed for 88-92 runs in arrears on the first innings. and at the close of play they required 236 runs for victory with eight wickets in hand.

Universities in Action. A splendid innings for 118 by R. H. J. Brooke enabled Oxford to gain a 10 wickets victory over Leveson-Gower's XI, in spite of brilliant bowling by Stroud, who took 7 wickets for 82 runs.

A. G. Hazell, the Cambridge skipper, registered his second century of the season when he scored 104 not out against the M.C.C. at Lord's. And his splendid effort saved Cambridge from defeat. The Light Blues, having 116 runs in arrears with only three wickets in hand, were rescued by Hazell's century.

AUSTIN SHOULD BEAT VINES TO-DAY

ENGLISHMAN'S EXPERIENCE AND COURAGE

HUGHES AND PERRY FAVOURITES

Mlle. Sigart and Miss Ryan to BID FOR THE "DOUBLE."

Wimbledon, Yesterday.

Bunny Austin should be able to give England her first singles victory at Wimbledon after a lapse of twenty-five years when he meets Ellsworth Vines in the Anglo-American Final to-morrow.

Austin is the more experienced player of the two. He has played at Wimbledon on former occasions and his court-craft and experience should weigh the balances in his favour. Vines, on the other hand, is making his first appearance at Wimbledon and has only two years of big tennis behind him. He is a hard-hitting player and speedy both in stroke production and on the court, but he lacks the court-craft of the Englishman, who has the advantage of meeting the American for the first time on a court which definitely favours Austin.

The English player has not had such an easy passage as Vines in his path to the Final and the fresh experience gained should prove an asset to him.

Fred Perry, at one time a favourite for the Singles title, will be all out for a title in his second attempt at Wimbledon. Partnered by Hughes he is opposed to a more experienced and aged pair in Borotra and Brugnon.

Hughes and Perry, however, have shown amazing co-operation in their recent matches, and will walk on to the courts to-morrow warm favourites in spite of the French pair's triumph over Allison and Von Ryn, America's No. 1 ranking pair. Hughes and Perry are out to dispel all doubts regarding Britain's No. 1 ranking doubles pair and are determined to establish themselves as a better combination than Ian Collins and Dr. J. C. Gregory, of whom much has been written.

Harry Hopman is the fourth British representative in to-morrow's Finals and partnered by Mlle. Sigart, the Belgian champion, he should stand a very good chance of success in the Mixed Doubles against Maier, the Spanish champion, and Elizabeth Ryan, the finest lady doubles player in the world.

Elizabeth Ryan, who is now nearly 35 years of age, has a great opportunity to record the "double" as she is in both the Mixed Doubles and the Women's Doubles Finals. In partnership with Helen Jacobs, and not with Helen Wills as was announced at the commencement of the Wimbledon tournament, she will be opposed to last year's finalists, Mlle. Sigart and Mlle. Metaxa. She will, however, find in Mlle. Sigart a worthy opponent, for she too is striving to bring off the "double."

The United States, though possessing a representative in three of to-morrow's Finals, are not in the strong position they were last year, when as a nation they captured three of the five titles. This year they have had Helen Wills again in the field, but her triumph is the only victory to be recorded by America.

Full results as cable by Reuter were as follows:

Women's Singles—Final. Mrs. Wills-Moody (U.S.A.) beat Miss Helen Jacobs (U.S.A.) 6-3, 6-1.

Men's Doubles—Semi-Final. Jean Borotra and Jacques Brugnon (France) beat Wilmur Allison and John Van Ryn (U.S.A.) 6-3, 6-2, 6-4.

G. P. Hughes and Fred Perry (Britain) beat Christian Bousseus and Andre Merlin (France) 8-6, 6-1, 6-3.

Mixed Doubles—Semi-Final. Harry Hopman and Mlle. Sigart beat Jacques Brugnon and Mme. Mathieu (France) 6-4, 6-4.

H. Maier and Miss E. Ryan beat Henri Cochet and Mrs. Fearnley-Whittingstall 7-5, 3-6, 6-1.

Women's Doubles—Semi-Final. Miss E. Ryan and Miss Helen Jacobs (U.S.A.) beat Mlle. Payot and Miss Thomas 6-1, 6-2.

Mlle. Metaxa and Mlle. Sigart beat Mrs. Holcroft-Watson and Miss Harvey (Britain) 7-5, 6-2.

After speeches and parades that lasted throughout the night, the Democrats settled down this morning to the main task of electing a Presidential candidate from nine names, of which Mr. Franklin Roosevelt was the favourite and Mr. Al Smith second favourite.

Others proposed were "Cactus Jack" Garner, ex-Governor of Virginia, Mr. Byrd Governor of Maryland, Mr. Ritchie, the ex-Missouri Senator, Mr. James Reed, Chicago banker, Mr. Nevin Traylor, Governor of Ohio, Mr. White, Governor of Oklahoma and "Alfalfa Bill" Murray.

Nobody secured outright nomination on the first ballot, Mr. Roosevelt polling 666 1/2, which was 108 1/2 short of the required majority. Al Smith secured 201 1/2 and Mr. Garner 90 1/2.

Mr. Roosevelt announced that he would insist that the session continue until a nomination was made. — Reuter.

LAUSANNE TALKS CONTINUE.

Germany to Pay.

AMOUNT AND COMPOSITION YET UNDECIDED.

London, Yesterday.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Mr. Neville Chamberlain, returned to Lausanne to-day to resume his work on the Executive Bureau set up by the Lausanne Conference to draft a final plan for settlement of reparations.

The Bureau which has been in almost constant session since Wednesday night met again this morning following the visit to Mr. Ramsay MacDonald by the German delegates Herr Von Papen and Herr Von Krieselg.

Agreement has been reached that reparations payments, now centering round the composition of payment are to be made by Germany in final discharged of her reparations liabilities.

Differences still outstanding concern the amount, and the circumstances in which this payment should become payable. While the Committee of Seven is endeavouring to settle these points experts of various delegations are studying the methods of making bonds to cover the eventual payment. — British Wireless Service.

EUROPEAN DROWNED

T. H. Henry Disappears at Lai Chi-kok.

AN UNEMPLOYED SEAMAN.

POLICE FAIL TO RECOVER BODY.

A drowning fatality, the victim of which was a European unemployed seaman, named T. H. Henry, aged 41 years, at Lai-chi-kok bathing beach yesterday afternoon, according to a Police report.

He went bathing at about two o'clock yesterday afternoon, leaving his clothes at the By-the-Sea Cafe, on the shore. It is believed that the victim either got into difficulties, or had contemplated suicide, as he failed to return to shore after many hours.

Becoming anxious as to his whereabouts, Miss Jenny Hall, proprietress of the By-the-Sea Cafe, hastened to the Sham Shui Po Police Station where she made a report. A Police launch was subsequently sent to the bay, but all efforts to recover the body have so far failed. Up to a late hour last night the victim had not been found. His clothes were taken to the Police Station. Only a few cents were found in his pockets.

His passport revealed the name of T. H. Henry, born in 1891. His occupation was that of marine engineer, and he is a native of Liverpool, England.

The Police are unable to state how long Henry has been in the Colony, but it appears that he has been out of work for some time past, as the last time he held seaman's papers was in November last year.

Eleven persons from the Melbourne, including the Captain and first and third officers, were drowned. There were 15 survivors who are being taken to Queenstown aboard the Seminole, which was practically undamaged. — Reuter.

BRIGHT BATHING SUITS THIS SUMMER.

PIJAMAS MORE MASCULINE.

Bathing suits this summer promise to be very gay; white, yellow and bright green are the fashionable colours. If you knit very beautifully, you can make your own, but the machine made ones in good heavy wool is preferable. Most of the suits this year have no skirts, but they have decorative touches, such as suggested revers in a contrasting colour, stripes etc. A very attractive one consists of a one-piece suit and a pair of shorts and a short jacket of the same material which could be slipped on after bathing.

Beach pyjamas are much more masculine this year, which is an improvement; for some of the suits last year were no more than modified garden party frocks, and looked very untidy and unsuitable. Wide trousers are still fashionable, but to balance them there are neat little tailored ones worn with gay cardigan coats. Woollen and silk ones are mostly worn at the English sea-side; though when and if the summer comes, we shall all blossom out into cottons and cretonnes. River pyjamas have made their bow this summer also. The pair the writer liked, had wide Oxford trousers in gray flannel and a smart little double-breasted coat in green with short sleeves.

ELEGANCE AT EVENING.

A black dress with short white fur or velvet coat seems to be everyone's choice these evenings, and the higher the fur collar the better it is liked.

The usual alternative is a white frock with black coat.

Most of the new evening coats although brief, fit snugly to the figure and prove as useful as they are charming.

Then again, so far as one can generalize about women's fashion taste "no flowers by request." Neither is much jewellery worn, a simple diamond bracelet is sufficient, or an emerald provides a lovely and costly pendant. Such pendants full at the back.

A simple and delicious way to use any old scraps of stale, cheese, which would otherwise be wasted, is to make them into "cream," cheese. Prepare a saucepan of boiling milk and grate the cheese into it as finely as possible. Continue to add cheese to the milk until it becomes the consistency of a thick paste. Pour it into a basin to get cold and then serve after luncheon or dinner as an excellent substitute for "genuine" cream cheese. The best way to prevent cheese from becoming either dry or mouldy is to wrap it up in a thin piece of muslin which has previously been wrong out in vinegar.

A moderate-sized chicken will provide three good meals for two persons if used in the following way. Before cooking the chicken cut off the wings and drumsticks. If they are very small cut off the whole of one leg, including the thigh. Make a good gravy with the giblets, and stew the legs and wings until very tender. Serve with bread sauce, gravy, and a few little rolls

THE SUMMER EVENING GOWN

Charming Simplicity

NEW STYLE FOR INFORMAL WEAR.

Big pink roses spaced over a sunny yellow ground is one of the pattern fabrics used by Jean Patou for the new summer evening gowns. Styles are elegantly constructed, and with such well-calculated simplicity that they could be repeated in linen, pique, satin, or crepe.

The waist-length capelet line brings extra charm to figured mousselines and taffetas when velvet without any trimming is chosen in a deep rich tone to go with a print. Petunia and dark ruby red are charming colours, and in both instances velvet belts to tone swathe waist-lines on the gown. This graceful short-capped evening mode supplies the three-piece mood to a colourful lame model when worn on top of a semi-fitted sleeveless high-backed vestee jacket, which, in its turn, reveals a full décolleté evening gown.

Another pretty evening theme is when scarlet cire ribbon is worked up with two shades of pale pink for a waistbelt high ties in a big bow at one side of an off-white lace gown. This touch of scarlet takes effect again on a black watered moire cocktail frock. Unlike the majority of these new models it finishes a little below mid-calf level, and with its low back décolleté contributes a new style for informal evening wear.

All the other models in this category are on a much shorter level, and they possess intriguing backs that make them particularly adaptable for wearing on afternoon occasions out of doors without their accompanying jackets. Patou conveys this afternoon-cocktail aspect in a subtle way by evolving a distinctive note from actual sun-back and semi-evening décolletés. Only

BUTTON TRIMMINGS ARE "IN."

A Revival Indicated.

The home dressmaker has cause to congratulate herself on the fact that buttons are again fashionable as trimmings, for never was a smart effect.

But the amateur must lay her plans for the decorations very deliberately. She has to make up her mind at what distance apart the buttons must come, this being decided, of course, by their size. This done, she must measure accurately and mark the points; the fraction of inequality will entirely mar the effect of the button row.

The fashionable dress of the moment, tight to the knees and flaring below, lends itself well to a row of buttons both at the back and in front. The rows should end where the flare begins, but if the graduated fullness starts just below the hips, the buttons will look well continued right to the hem.

Nothing accentuates a slender arm better than a row of small buttons on the sleeve from wrist to elbow, but do not follow the line of the seam, for this will bring the trimmings under the arm. They must come well to the outside.

Clusters of three or four small buttons trim the new little "mess-jackets" that are displacing cardigans for country wear. They appear on the fronts and continue to the upstanding collars. A revival of buttons and "frogs" of braid is indicated in some advance tailored models.

Buttons are appearing even on the beret, which is fastened down at the side with three or four in chromiumplate.

glimpses of the bare back are made visible.

Long centre back openings sometimes run from the nape, and braiser effects from the top of the shoulder.

Rearranging Room

LOW FURNITURE MAKES ROOM LOOK LARGER.

THE CHESTERFIELD.

Rooms get set expressions, just as do people. The "make-up" becomes hard and ingrained and their furniture cannot bear to be an inch out of place. This is what gives a dead look to so many houses, which are either devoid of untidy young people or which possess owners whose arrangements have become merely a habit. New paint and paper, of course, help a room to mobilize its expression, but this is the more expensive way of achieving variety.

A much better plan is to think now and again of a fundamental alteration. The divan, Chesterfield, or mere sofa, for instance, may sometimes be allowed to stick out into the room instead of taking up a long wall-space. There are certain pieces of furniture which may stand out in the middle of the room—a standard bookcase or an armchair—without being set against a wall or without the necessarily guarding the fire.

Look Larger. Low furniture obviously makes a room look larger than that which is high, and with low furniture any amount of changing can be accomplished. Rooms can be arranged in groups or in corners. A Chesterfield sticking out at right angles to the fire, can be finished up with a square bookcase, if this is about its own height.

A corner may be grouped round a little low table. A tall cupboard or escritoire may leave its central position against the wall and fit into a niche, which gives more sense of space.

Light Blues Win At Lawn Tennis

Rain Cancels Five Matches

INDIAN DAVIS CUP PAIR SHOW IMPROVED FORM.

OXFORD LOSE BY 12-4

Cambridge won the forty-eighth Lawn Tennis match against Oxford on Saturday at Cambridge. The match depends on the result of 21 ties — 12 Singles and nine Doubles — but as rain had prevented play on Friday only 16 were played, Cambridge winning 12 of them. The conditions could hardly have been worse. The heavy rain, which had started early on Friday morning, eliminated the grass courts, and on Saturday a penetrating drizzle alternated with downpours which several times interrupted play. The light, too, was poor, and the courts afforded little or no foothold. In the circumstances some of the play was remarkably good.

The best Single of the day was that in which Tinkler beat Malfroy after a game in which each player had to compete as much against his opponent. Malfroy settled down to his game more quickly than Tinkler, and by perpetually coming up to the net he so hustled his opponent that he was able to come up on strokes of indifferent quality and he certain that he would be presented with comparatively easy shots to kill. Before long Tinkler found himself led by 5 games to 2, and had he pursued his original tactics of staying at the back of the court and trying to score points almost entirely by means of passing shots he would, in all probability, have lost the set and, subsequently the match. At this point, however, Tinkler discarded to a certain extent his passing shots and proceeded to drive Malfroy to the back of the court by lobbing to the backhand corner, and then following up these shots to the net, where his volleying was as successful as Malfroy's had been. Malfroy did not at once submit to being driven back on the defensive, and for some time there was, quite often, the unusual spectacle in a Single of both men standing within the service line, and, aided by the slowness of the court, and their own remarkable agility, being able to sustain comparatively long rallies from this position. After being beaten rather easily by Tinkler in the morning, A. Madan Mohan played some really good lawn tennis in the afternoon, when he beat B. W. Finnigan, the Oxford captain, losing only four games in the two sets. Madan Mohan had no difficulty in keeping his opponent away from the net, for his passing shots produced from apparently impossible positions are his best strokes. From the back of the court Madan Mohan was always Finnigan's superior, as his shots covered a wider area than his opponent's, and Finnigan was kept on the run trying to return Madan Mohan's shots instead of being allowed to make his own. J. Charanjiva, who, with Madan Mohan, formed this year's Indian Davis Cup team, was more than once within a point of being beaten by G. C. Frank, the young American left-hander. Frank is deceptive player, for, while there is no very great power behind his shots, the ball always seemed to go into the part of the court from which his opponent found it most difficult to make a good return. Frank led 5-2 in the final set, but at this point Charanjiva decided to go out for the shots and risk the possible loss of the match. He therefore came up to the net at every possible opportunity and with the aid of his long reach and good eye made a sequence of winning volleys. Frank's steadiness never faltered in spite of having to pass his opponent instead of playing him from the back of the court at the pace he had chosen, and in the ninth game, with a lead of 5-3, he had four match points, but Charanjiva saved them all and went on to win the game with a beautiful backhand volley. Encouraged by this, and in spite of an attack of cramp in his thigh and hand, Charanjiva started hitting the ball much harder and following up to the net where his volleying almost invariably produced outright winners, and he won the next three games for the set and match. The results were:

JAPAN SENDS 203.

Los Angeles, May 23.
William M. Henry, sports technical director of the Tenth Olympics, said to-day that assurance has been received from ten of the fifteen nations expected to compete in the games here July 30 to August 14 that they will be represented by approximately 1,000 athletes.

This total will exceed 2,000 when the rest of the countries report, Henry said, for some of the leading contenders, including South American nations, have not been heard from.

The Japanese have shown the greatest enthusiasm, Henry said. They plan to have 203 contestants, six of whom arrived to-day. These are equestrians. Eleven schooled horses from Japan arrived several weeks ago.

Italy's Team Numbers 120. Other nations which have reported as to the probable size of their teams are Italy, 120; Germany and Great Britain, 125 each; France, 78; Mexico, 50; 40 each from Denmark and Finland; 24 from India and 12 from South Africa.

It will be only a matter of days now until the Olympic village, with its complete municipal set-up of fire and police departments, post office, money exchange bureau, amusement centre and dining halls, will start filling up.

Woods Completes "Double" For Ireland

Wins Junior and Senior T.T. at Isle of Man

DEATH DARED FOR 3 HOURS

NORTON TRIUMPHS AND GIVES WOODS
NEW T.T. RECORD.

Douglas (I.O.M.), June 10.

Stanley Woods, of Dublin, completed a "double" for Ireland to-day when he followed up his victory in the Junior T.T. on Monday by winning the Senior T.T. at the record of 79.38 miles an hour.

Woods won the Senior T.T. in 1926 and was third last year. To-day he outpaced the most talented field that has ever contested a motor-cycling road race. After his victory he was congratulated by Prince George, who had been an interested spectator of the race, and who later presented the trophies.

Conditions were ideal for a very thrilling race. Woods took the lead in the third lap after Simpson had held it, and was never passed. He rode with superb judgment, lapping consistently at 80 m.p.h., and he won by over two minutes from Guthrie.

Simpson, now a veteran, set the pace, and after leading by three seconds on the first of the seven laps broke all records for the course at over 81 m.p.h. Then his clutch-control broke. Handley, most famous of all, threatened the leadership for 100 miles, but he paid the penalty of his infinite daring when he crashed into a ditch, from which he was extricated suffering from slight injuries. It was a miracle that he was not killed.

Two Miles A Minute. Though other riders crashed in their breakneck efforts to keep in the vanguard, no one was seriously hurt. Tolley was thrown twenty yards from a skidding machine, and Percy Hunt, who won last year, took a toss at speed, and his machine was wrecked.

For more than three hours the riders dared death almost every minute. The foreign challenge was beaten off with ease, for the first lap was sufficient to prove the superiority of the home riders and machines, but a great fight ensued between England, Scotland, and Ireland.

When Woods went off on his final lap with a comfortable lead of 98 sec., his pursuers made a strong challenge. Their machines leaped from the road as they hit the bumps, and speeds of nearly two miles a minute were reached on the descent from Snafell. Guthrie passed Simpson to win second place, and Nott only just failed to do so by 6 sec. Result:

H.M.S. M.P.H.
Stanley Woods (Norton) 3 19 40 79.38
J. Guthrie (Norton) 3 21 59 78.47
J. H. Simpson (Norton) 3 22 13 78.35

Petrolle Offers Challenge To Canzoneri

New York, June 28.

Tony Canzoneri, world's lightweight champion, to-day signed a contract to defend his title against Billy Petrolle, the Fargo Express, in a 15-round bout on August 8.

Canzoneri won the title from Al Singer in 1930. He twice placed his crown at stake against Jack "Kid" Berg of England and successfully retained it in both contests. He knocked out Berg in their first meeting and the second after a hard fight.

In November, 1930, Kid Chocolate of Cuba made an attempt at the title but was given a beating by Tony.

New York fight fans have looked forward to a Petrolle-Canzoneri fight for a long time. Tony was to have met the Fargo Express in May, but for some reasons the meeting was postponed.

The meeting of the pair should prove one of the best between lightweights in many years. Both fighters are among the few popular ones performing in this division to-day. They are willing scrappers, excellent boxers and possess enough punch to make things interesting.

Both have been active in the last couple of months. In one of the most recent bouts Canzoneri gave Harry Dubinsky a drubbing in 10 rounds in Chicago. Petrolle met and defeated Bat Battalino in May after beating him two months previous.

Canzoneri first won the lightweight title in a match with Benny Bass in 1928 at the Madison Square Garden. After holding the crown for a few months he lost it to Andre Routis of France. Then in 1930 he came back to take it from Al Singer.

The champion has fought practically all the topnotchers in his class, Young Fernandez of the Philippines being one of his victims.

Petrolle has been angling to meet the champion for a long time. He is confident he can dethrone him, having beaten the champion in a non-title bout in 1930.

WIN FOR RADIO.

The Radio Sports Club Hockey XI beat the 3/9th Jats in their return match on the Marina Ground, on Friday afternoon, by the narrow margin of a goal to nil. The game was very fast and exciting, both teams distinguished themselves in turn.

Shanghai Greyhound Sets World Record

Queen Anne Covers 400 Yards
In 22.21 Seconds

SHANGHAI OWNERS SEND DOGS TO ENGLAND FOR BIG RACES

Shanghai, June 24.

A cable received in Shanghai yesterday morning from G. McKay confirms the fact that Mrs. W. R. McBain and A. Dierckling's racing dog, Queen Anne, has established a new world record over 400 yards covering the distance in 22.21 seconds.

MINU & MADAR THE GUESTS OF HONOUR.

Tribute to Heroes of May Interport.

A. R. Minu and A. H. Madar, the heroes of the Interport Cricket match in Shanghai last May, were the guests of honour last night at a dinner given by the members of the Indian Recreation Club.

Mr. A. el Arculli, the President of the I.R.C., in a short speech, said that they were all proud to honour two members of the Club who had so distinguished themselves in the interport at Shanghai in May. Their performance was all the more enhanced in view of the fact that they were playing under totally different conditions, away from home, and more important still—in their first interport match.

TWO SWIMMING GALAS TO-NIGHT.

Chinese Bathing Club and V.R.C.

The Victoria Recreation Club, the European Y.M.C.A., the South Wales Borderers, the Chinese Civil Servants' Association, and the Chinese Y.M.C.A. have all entered teams for the Open Relay Race at the first swimming gala to be held at the Chinese Bathing Club, North Point, to-night at 7.30 p.m.

Twelve events are on the programme and a fitting conclusion to the evening's entertainment will be a Water Polo match between the Chinese Bathing Club and the Royal Artillery. The prizes for the gala have been kindly donated by the Wing On Co., Ltd., and will be presented by Mrs. Peter Doo.

The Victoria Recreation Club are holding their second gala of the season to-night at 9.15 p.m.

This remarkable time was witnessed and is confirmed by Captain N. A. Bott the late manager of Luna Park, who is returning to this city having left England on June 18. The untimely end of Luna Park twelve months ago saw a shipment of local greyhounds for England to invade the racing track. Amongst others to go were Queen Anne, Marlow, Kismet, Running Wild, Cleopatra and Reville, and they were under the care of A. F. Short a Luna Park trainer.

Doubts Expressed. At the time of their departure from Shanghai many people were sceptical concerning the wisdom of sending Shanghai dogs to England, contending that training and running conditions here would prove detrimental to performances in England in spite of the fact that the times and performances recorded in Shanghai by these dogs more than favourably compared with those of the average winner on any of London's leading tracks.

Queen Anne's Answer. The really remarkable performance put up by Queen Anne in establishing a new world record for 400 yards should silence the critics who predicted nothing but trouble for local dogs in England.

Queen Anne immediately prior to her "easing off" following the closure of Luna Park, was regularly covering 500 yards in under 29 seconds and 625 yards in 30.50 seconds.

Two Other Possibles. A study of the N.G.R.C. Calendar and times being done at Wembley, White City and Harringay, London, three leading tracks, placed Queen Anne far above the average, and with Kismet and Marlow known to be only a shade slower than they may yet justify their owner's faith in their abilities to make good times on the Home courses.

Ruby's End. The untimely end of the dog Ruby in quarantine is now deplored more than ever; for surely Ruby might have proved a wonder dog. He met and defeated Queen Anne on several occasions.

Queen Anne's performances in making the 400 yards in such splendid time is all the more pleasing when it is realised that she was competing with some of the best greyhounds racing in England to-day.

Golf In A Wind— Henry Cotton's Hints

The wind has always been recognised as the great investigator of a golfer's real class. Those minor inaccuracies due to faults in the swing, the stance, the grip or the management of the weight, in a wind take unto themselves a colossal magnitude. But with the present small heavy ball the wind is not the potent factor that it was when the large floater was in use. To-day the wind has got to be very heavy before the golfer need become seriously perturbed.

The real masters of playing golf in the wind were those whose championship days are now over. Johnnie Ball's brassie shot against the wind has become a legend. It was a low-flying ball that reached its highest point of trajectory at the finish of its flight and then flopped down on to the green.

Johnnie Ball's peculiar palm grip of the right hand, together with his very open stance and the ball placed close to the right leg, all operated naturally in the production of this shot.

Harold Hilton's Skill. Horace Hutchinson is another legendary master of the wind. Westward Hol apparently taught him how necessary it is in a wind to curb any exuberance of swing, and Hutchinson used to do it through the simple trick of shortening his grip, which immediately shortened his swing.

But perhaps the greatest of all was Harold Hilton. He was not only a master of the wind, but completely revelled in its mastery. In his hey-day, the biggest gale or the veriest zephyr was immediately harnessed to his aid. In fact, Harold Hilton so delighted in pitting his extraordinary skill against the elements that even on calm days he was tempted to experiment with a little draw or a little cut when a straight shot would have sufficed.

(Coming to my own contemporaries, I always smile when I think how the critics here used to harbour the hope that our best side winds would prove too much for the American golfers. The Americans blew that hope sky-high more than once.

What Jones Did. In spite of the successes of Hagen and Farrell, and Diegel at Muirfield in 1929, some of these critics have continued to wonder what Bobby Jones would do in real rough weather. Personally I have no doubt. In point of fact, just about the finest shot that I have seen played in a wind was played by Bobby Jones during the foursomes part of the last Walker Cup match at Sandwich.

He was partnered with Doc Willing, and had to play the second shot at the tenth hole. There was a considerable and gusty wind blowing right across the tenth green from right to left. Bobby took a No. 2 iron, opened his stance a shade, restricted his pivot a shade, and thus imparted to the ball just sufficient drift to make it lean against the wind at the finish of its flight. The result of this classic effort was that Doc Willing was putting for a three.

Forget It! I suppose the reader will be looking for some tips in the playing of a wind. I would start by warning him that with the small heavy ball he should not allow his mind to become obsessed by the wind. Let him remember his past experiences, and how often he has made this remark: "There, I allowed for the wind, and it never came round."

Against a head wind one must avoid trying to hit the ball a good deal harder than usual. A know-the-temptation is a very strong one, but it must be resisted. One must make up one's mind to take the swing easily and to concentrate on hitting the ball accurately. In fact, the stronger the wind, the more easily should one try to swing the club.

With a following wind the temptation to hit the ball out of sight must be controlled. The other great danger with a strong following wind is for the wind to push one too quickly on to and past the ball. With a strong following wind there is always a tendency to get the hands in front of the ball at impact. Let the right leg carry a shade more weight and be completely determined to get at the back of the ball at the moment of impact.

Back on the Heels. If one hits the ball with the inside to out method, a cross wind from the right to left must be taken into consideration. It is going to impart to the ball a little more draw than one intends, and this must be allowed for. If one is desirous of holding the ball up against such a wind, then the stance must be opened a little and the pivot restricted. Such a proceeding will impart to the ball a slight cut or drift. But I do not advocate this where wooden club play is concerned.

The most difficult wind of all is the left to right wind, especially when it is blowing over one's left shoulder. The tendency of this wind is to push the player on to the ball and on to his toes. The great thing here is to get the weight well back on to the heels and to pin it down there like grim death.

Where the wind seems to be the ordinary golfer more than anywhere else is in his approach play. Against the wind he is so often dreadfully short, and, curiously enough, with the wind he is so often still shorter. Against the wind he sure not to under-club. An easier shot with a more powerful implement is always a sounder proposition. Playing down wind with approach clubs, do not take the wind too much into account. The mental impression is that one is always going to hit the ball too far. The result of this mental impression is that as one gets to the ball one unconsciously slows down the swing. Having selected your club, dismiss the wind from your mind, and play the shot as firmly and as crisply as if you were playing that shot on a calm day.

Mickey Walker Defeated By Johnny Risko

Cleveland, June 24.

The stock of diminutive Mickey Walker, who has been boomed as a candidate for the heavyweight championship because he held Jack Sharkey to a draw some months ago, fell heavily to-day when Johnny Risko gained a decisive points decision over him after twelve rounds.

Risko had Mickey on the floor in the second round, and led him all the way. Risko was a powerful proposition. Playing down wind with approach clubs, do not take the wind too much into account. The mental impression is that one is always going to hit the ball too far. The result of this mental impression is that as one gets to the ball one unconsciously slows down the swing. Having selected your club, dismiss the wind from your mind, and play the shot as firmly and as crisply as if you were playing that shot on a calm day.

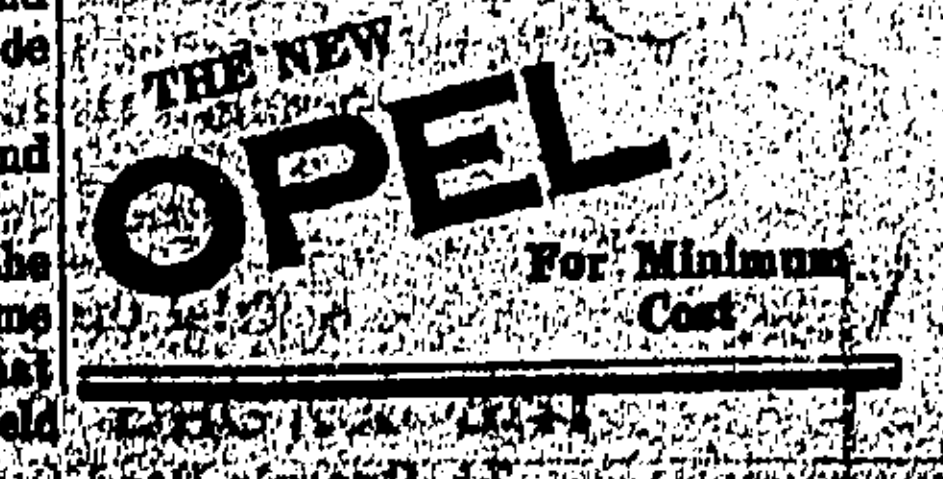

Everyone thought Risko was through long ago, but he staged a useful comeback, slugging, punching and rushing, and showing himself superior in every department as he annexed a clear-cut victory. Mickey appeared tired, fat and flabby. Risko on the other hand seemed to have found a new stride and looked good. Risko weighed in at 183½ and Walker at 171½. When Walker held Sharkey, the new champion, to a draw some months ago, everyone decided that the mighty little man was held in succession the welterweight and middleweight championships for an aggregate of almost a decade, might annex the major title before he got too old. Mickey is 31 years old, and according to the law of averages is getting up somewhere near his limit. Risko is a few months short of 30.

Whether Mickey has suddenly gone bad or Risko has suddenly found a new form is something for the fans to scratch their heads over.

Or it may mean that the whole heavyweight business is on a plane far below the days when Jack Dempsey and Gene Tunney were running it.

To-day's fight will probably hinder Walker, having another attempt against Sharkey and may install Risko again in the inner circle.

He had been divorced twice.

BISHOP REPLIES TO OPEN LETTER.

Worship Not Taught by Anti-Games Agitation.

London, June 1. The Bishop of Chichester (Dr. Bell) to-day replies to the open letter addressed to him by two Worthling clergymen regarding his attitude towards Sunday cinemas. The Bishop, in the Diocesan Gazette, writes: "Since about 1909 cinemas have been open on Sunday, and at the present moment they are open not only in London but in 96 other areas. The opening has been discovered to be illegal. . . . That there were many who wish Parliament to enact a prohibition is true. But is it not seem to us that the Church would be right in supporting this prohibition. We might have kept silent on these subjects, it is true, but we believe that this was an occasion on which the diocese had a right to look for some guidance from its Bishop.

Object of Sunday

"Therefore, we said what we felt. The first object for which Sunday is given is for the worship of God. Multitudes of our countrymen neglect that call, are altogether blind to that necessity. But we shall not teach them worship by agitating against recreation, games, cinemas. We are much more likely to establish a prejudice the other way. . . ."

MARRIED WOMAN SOLD AS BRIDE.

Cheating Charge.

Delhi, May 19. The story of how a young married Brahmin girl of Delhi was married for Rs. 3,000 as a Bania maiden was related before Mian Jagdish Singh, Magistrate, First Class, when six accused including the girl and her mother were charged with cheating. The prosecution story was that one Mohari Lal, a shopkeeper of Matadgunj, Bahawalpur State, arrived in Delhi in search of a suitable girl for marriage. By chance he met one of the accused, Mansingh who befriended him. Mohari Lal told Mansingh why he had come to Delhi.

Beautiful Girl.

Mansingh told him he could get a very beautiful girl for him provided he could pay well. Mansingh then introduced Mohari Lal to the accused Ghasi Ram, saying that Ghasi Ram had a niece whom he was prepared to give in marriage. Ghasi Ram took Mohari Lal to his sister and after his sister had an interview with her prospective son-in-law, she told him that she wanted Rs. 4,000 for her daughter Kokila. The girl was shown to Mohari Lal, who liked her ultimately the mother was promised Rs. 3,000 which Mohari Lal paid. The marriage was duly celebrated in a commodious bungalow and Mohari Lal took the bride to his home in Bahawalpur State.

Story of Kidnapping.

Soon after reaching there, the girl made a statement that she had been kidnapped by Mohari Lal. She stated before the state police that she was Brahmin girl that her husband was in Delhi and that Mohari Lal was not her husband. Accordingly Mohari Lal was taken into police custody and the State Police asked for details from the Delhi Police. The latter found that the whole marriage was a farce and that the man had been a victim of a gang of crooks. Mohari Lal was acquitted and the persons, who are alleged to have duped him, were arrested in Delhi and placed before a magistrate. One suspect is absconding.

WHAT ARE JAPAN'S AIMS?

Noted Writer Discusses Recent Upheavals

Causes of Assassinations And Terrorism

THE MEN WHO RULE IN TOKYO

(By George E. Sokolsky.)

The struggle in Japan between the politicians and the militarists—a political, economic and at times even a social conflict—reached a climax when a group of military cadets entered the official residence of Ki Inukai, Premier of Japan, and killed him.

"Blood Brothers," bound together by the code of the Samurai, followers of the patriotic priest of the Nichiren sect of Buddhists, Nishio Inoue, these young men represented not only the rising tide of military opposition to corruption and weakness among Japan's politicians, but also the intensified resentment of the Japanese people against government by political parties. These parties, wholly Western in form and therefore contrary to Japanese political traditions, are held responsible for the economic depression at home and political failure abroad. In this complication of differing opinions and ideas looms large the growing conviction in most circles that only by a new Japanese orientation in Manchuria can the nation be saved from an economic debacle.

Division of Power.

The struggle between the military men and the politicians in Japan is historic. The Japanese Constitution itself gives evidence of the necessity for compromise between them, for it excludes the army and navy from the tendency toward democratic institutions charted in that document by Prince Ito. The army and navy stand out separately from other administrative departments. To fill the post of Minister of War or Minister of Navy, politicians have to bargain with these groups; if they do not, no Cabinet can be formed. In any chart of expression of sentiment by the Japanese people the army and navy stand close to the top of the scale, only the Emperor and the peers of the blood being higher. The politicians are close to the bottom of the scale in the esteem of the public. Not uncommonly they gain their seats by barter and the bribery of voters, by agreements to serve special interests and causes, often by subventions from mercantile houses hoping for contracts.

To the man in the street the party politician is usually a person to be distrusted. The military man, on the other hand, appears as a heroic individual whose group has elevated Japan from a small island kingdom off the coast of China to one of the five great powers of the earth. Whereas the politician has often involved Japan in difficulties, the military hero has brought her glory. It can be argued that the politician often has to clean up the mess of military glory; that each war has cost money which had to be borrowed; that the upkeep of the military and naval establishments may be an attendant cause of the depression which has lasted a decade; that military intervention in government, not being understood in the Occident, has aroused a universal suspicion of Japan's motives and objectives. But to argue thus is to rationalize beyond the immediate situation, which is that the politicians in Japan grow rich while the people, who elevate them, suffer poverty; that the military men have gained Manchuria, while the politicians have lost Shanghai.

Causes of unrest.

Any consideration of the unrest in Japan must take account of three factors: First, the long continued economic depression. Second, the economic structure within the empire. Third, the psychic effect of Japan's relations with China. It is impossible in this article to treat the depression in detail or schematically. The following examples of depressed conditions have been selected as indicating the general trend: From 1920 to 1930 Japan's public debt was increased by $2,718,000,000 (say $1,359,000,000) so that it has been necessary to borrow $135,500,000 annually. From 1917 to 1930 the export of gold was prohibited. The result was a varying rate of exchange and generally high prices for commodities. The cost of living rose steadily. The embargo on the exportation of gold was lifted on Jan. 11, 1930; yet the yen did not reach par, due to the Sino-Japanese war and world conditions, and the cost of living was further increased for a people who import between 3 and 4 per cent. of their food supplies.

Japanese financiers last December believed they could solve their economic problems by taking Japan off the gold standard, but the costly military expeditions to China and the inability to find markets in the United States and China vitiated the advantages of this move. Japan is dependent upon the sale of raw silk in the United States and manufactured cotton goods in China. Owing to high wages, a rising cost of living, variable exchange, the world depression and the difficulties in China, her exports for raw silk and manufactured cotton goods have decreased. In 1929, she exported yen 949,938,000 of silk. In 1930, yen 830,718,000; the latter figure will be considerably reduced for 1931 and 1932 when the reports are published. In 1929 Japan exported yen 453,349,000 of cotton yarns and materials; in 1930, yen 298,200,000; in 1931 and 1932, the further reduction has been cataclysmic.

Trade with China in 1930 fell 31 per cent. below that of 1929. The year 1931 represented a decrease of 22 per cent. under 1930. Whereas in 1930 exports to China fell 25 per cent., in 1931 they fell 40 per cent. The Sino-Japanese war brought trade between the two countries to a standstill for many months during 1931 and 1932. Since 1925, agricultural and forestry products in Japan have declined in value from yen 4,819,000,000 to yen 2,250,000,000. The American commercial attaché in Tokyo estimates that the average Japanese farmer nets only between yen 100 and yen 180 ($50 to $90) a year, after paying off loans, equipment, fertilizer, &c. Rice for a year and a half has been selling below cost.

Laws limiting the importation of rice were imposed after the bumper crop year of 1930, but the suffering of the Japanese peasant remained intense. Although the price of rice rose last year, he was without genuine relief. His crop was very short and he had to pay a percentage of it in rents. As the peasant represents 40 per cent. of the population, his distress affects the entire economic structure.

Taxes in Japan are high. The adventure in Manchuria and Shanghai has made their reduction impossible. These few figures suffice to paint in the background of the depression. Although unemployment figures are not so large as in the United States, they are high enough for Japan. The social system there absorbs the unemployed, but there is a limit to the capacity of an enlarged family for feeding itself.

Concentration of Wealth. Stimulating discontent in Japan is a concentration of wealth such as no other country knows. A few firms dominate the entire economic life of the country: Mitsui, Fuyo, Dai-Ichi Kangyo Bank, Sanwa, Dai-Nippon Bank, and a few others have erected and still manage every economic structure in Japan. They control the liquid assets of the nation; they employ the Japanese proletariat in their factories, mills and mines. They give work to the "white-collar" elements in their offices and banks. In recent years they have often manipulated the political life of the nation.

Although Japan has a central bank and a government-owned bank, the private banking of the country is controlled by the small group of firms. The public debt is rapidly increasing, and the government is therefore in a position to borrow money for the bank to finance industrial enterprises and thus dominate industry. The relationship of the banks to politics gives them a voice in the distribution of government subsidies to industry.

Thus the bankers and industrialists—a small, closely knit group, with ownership vested in feudal families but the management recruited from the middle class—exercises a control over the economic life of the country which in times of prosperity is popular but which, during periods of depression, is resented.

Into this atmosphere of discontent and depression entered, the aggravated Chinese problem. Baron Shidehara's policy of conciliation was never popular, but events during the Summer of 1931 aroused mass opinion to a keener opposition. Then came the Manchuria adventure, which appealed to the people's emotions. This was offset later by the agreement settling the Shanghai incident and the decision speedily to withdraw Japanese troops from that city. As objectionable as that agreement may have been to the Chinese, to the Japanese it has had the mortifying effect of a loss of face.

Targets of Attack. Resentment in Japan, due to these various causes, has become articulated in the heaping of blame upon the politicians, bankers, and industrialists. Before Japan became a modern nation, the politician, that is the civilian public official, was not an important individual. As secretary, treasurer or agent of the feudal lord, he was an assistant to and a satellite of a military personage. The Emperor Meiji elevated him to high rank and social prestige by employing him in the reconstruction of modern Japan. The genius of Prince Ito, Marquis Okuma, Marquis Inoue, Viscount Shibusawa, Prince Saionji, Prince Matsukata and other civilians produced modern Japan. Prince Ito and Prince Saionji both believed in party government, and political parties came into existence early in modern Japanese history, but it was not until fourteen years ago that party government was achieved.

By party government in Japan is meant that the Cabinet is formed by the political party which has the largest voting strength in the Diet. Before the Hara Ministry of 1918, the Premier has selected by the Emperor, upon the advice of the Elder Statesmen without regard to the party in power in the Diet. Ever since Hara, the Emperor has twice ignored the party government system, by the appointment of the Admiral Kato and the Yamamoto Cabinets. But these superparty Ministries lasted only a few months and did not lessen the dominance of the political party in government.

Political parties in Japan, as in this country, have to finance themselves by subscriptions from their members and friends. Since the introduction of universal suffrage in 1925, the cost of winning elections has risen. Political parties have been forced to raise huge sums, often secretly, to finance a victory. In this respect the Seiyukai, the party of which Premier Inukai was president, has been particularly able; it is the oldest party having been organized by no less a person than Prince Ito in 1900 and having had among its members Prince Saionji, when he was active in politics. The raising and spending of this party's funds have invariably led to charges of corruption. Foreigners in Japan have tended to liken the Seiyukai to Tammany Hall in New York. Although the comparison is exaggerated, the Seiyukai does often employ methods which to the Japanese are reprehensible.

The Seiyukai's opposition, now going by the name of the Minseitō, has also been faced by the same problem of financing and has also been accused of corruption. The differences between these major parties have been in personalities and not in essential principles. Both have been opportunistic in immediate situations. The particular charges during each election are that parties accept funds from dominant industrialists and bankers in return for which they look after the interests of the industrialists and bankers. Furthermore, each party is accused of selling votes. It is estimated that as much as yen 15,000,000 is paid to candidates for the Diet by the parties. This is a very large sum, and it is estimated that the parties have received as much as yen 100,000,000 in the past few years.

Tragically, the parties have been unable to solve the economic problems of the country, and the people have become disillusioned with the political system. The military men, on the other hand, have been able to bring glory to Japan, and the people have looked to them for a solution to their economic problems.

The military men have been able to bring glory to Japan, and the people have looked to them for a solution to their economic problems. The military men have been able to bring glory to Japan, and the people have looked to them for a solution to their economic problems.

BRITAIN'S BIGGEST ELECTRIC SIGN.

Huge Cigarette Advt. in Trafalgar Square.

Trafalgar Square, London, now possesses the largest illuminated sign in the British Isles. This sign, which reads, "Buy British! Smoke Canadian Club Tobacco and Cigarettes," occupies a site measuring 110 ft. by 40 ft. high.

It is constructed of Claudogen neon tubes which are placed in the trough of the letters and it is interesting to note that, where as these tubes appear to be red hot, they are actually always quite cool, no matter for how long they are alight. To produce the intense glow about 185 miles of wire are employed, including the 34 transformers, which have a total current consumption of approximately 9 units per hour. The actual cost of the current consumed by this huge sign is surprisingly small, being only about 1s. 4d. per hour.

The sign is switched on and off automatically by means of an Oram photo cell, which is a device sensitive to light. This is used in an electrical circuit in such a way that a small change in current is produced in the circuit when the light on the cell alters. Although this change in current is very small—the actual current is about a millionth part of that flowing through an ordinary 100 watt electric lamp—it can be magnified by means of an ordinary wireless valve just in the same way as feeble wireless signals are amplified and made to operate a loud-speaker.

The amplified current is used to operate the switch gear which puts the sign on or off. In this way, at nightfall, or at any time when daylight falls below a certain limit, the sign automatically lights up. Thus, it is always on when its value to the advertiser is greatest and its operation is made independent of the judgment of an attendant.

This huge metal letters are finished with cellulose enamel in a colour which is in strong contrast to the building behind them and in this manner the advertiser gets 100 per cent. publicity in daylight as well as at night.

"SUICIDE FLEET."

Thrilling action, colourful spectacle, a strong story and sterling performances by an unusually capable cast combine to make RKO Pathe's "Suicide Fleet" truly the Navy's Big Parade.

This sensational picture which comes to the Central Theatre to-day, has been produced on a big scale. A story of the Navy, it uses not one warship, but a fleet. In the sea battles actual ships are sunk by shells in scenes as spectacular as any ever brought to the screen.

Bill Boyd, Robert Armstrong and James Gleason head the cast while red-haired Ginger Rogers is the leading woman. Harry Baerster has an important role and other leads are played by Frank Belcher, Ben Alexander, Henry Victor and Hans Joby.

Albert Rogell directed. Lew Lipton is credited for the screen play which is taken from a story by Commander Herbert A. Jones, U.S.N. The dialogue laurels go to F. McGrew, Willis. And while credit is being passed out, the United States Navy cannot be overlooked. Navy ships and Navy men made the picture possible.

ACTRESSES AS TYPISTS.

Tokyo, May 31. An "Employment Club" has been organized by a group of actresses in Tokyo who find that they cannot earn their living by their art alone. The object of the club is to make extra money by taking on temporary work. The office of the club is in a little theatre and the officials spend their time telephoning to the heads of business firms, asking if they have any posts to offer. The actresses will accept work as managers, typists, art models, journalists, sandwichmen, assistants to amateur actresses, etc.

CHANNEL FOG S.O.S.

Steamer's Passengers
Taken Off by Lifeboat.

London, May 15.

During a dense fog in the Channel last evening the British steamer Roumelian, bound from London to Alexandria, and the French steamer St. Nazaire came into collision twenty miles off the Needles.

The Roumelian was badly holed on the starboard side and sent out S.O.S. messages saying she was in danger of sinking.

Two Isle of Wight lifeboats—the motor lifeboat from Yarmouth and the sailing lifeboat from Brook—put out.

Among the crew of the Brook Lifeboat was Major-General J. E. B. Seely, the ex-Secretary of State for War. He is a regular member of the crew.

The Yarmouth boat found the disabled steamer about six miles off the Needles, her main hold flooded and all her boats swung out ready for the crew to leave.

She was able, however, to make progress under her own steam, and after the Yarmouth boat, at the request of the captain, had taken off four passengers—two men and two women—the Roumelian continued to make her way slowly up the Solent towards Southampton.

The St. Nazaire is understood to have escaped with minor damage to the forepeak.

The Roumelian, 2,687 tons, is owned by the Ellerman Lines.

Mr. W. Cotton, coxswain of the Yarmouth lifeboat, told a Daily Express representative after the rescue that the search for the Roumelian was one of the most difficult he has had for some years.

"The whole Channel was shrouded in fog," he said, "and we were searching for four hours before we eventually heard the Roumelian's sirens and saw her distress signals."

Pumps at Full Force.

"When we discovered her she was lying awash aft. She had been very badly holed and there was grave danger of her sinking at one time. The pumps were working at full force while the ship's carpenters attempted to effect temporary repairs."

"The four passengers were on the foredeck and we took them into the lifeboat over the bows of the Roumelian."

"The captain of the Roumelian told his crew of fifty men that if any of them wished to return to the shore in the lifeboat they could do so, but they one and all agreed to stay on board."

"We landed the four passengers at Yarmouth, where they were looked after in local hotels for the night. They were rather unnerved by their experience."

YOUNG PASSENGERS

Good Accommodation
on Bibby Line.

We feel sure that all parents travelling out of home will be glad to learn that several improvements have been made on the Bibby Line for the care and comfort of children.

All the ships have now been fitted with comfortable and well-ventilated playrooms on the promenade deck whereas in some of these were formerly on the main deck near the dining saloon. These playrooms can now all be entered from an inside alleyway so there is no chance in bad weather of children getting wet on their way to and fro.

A stewardess is definitely detailed for the duty of looking after the children at meal times and also while the parents are in the saloon having their own meals. This will materially assist mothers travelling with children and unaccompanied by a nurse.

The children's meals have also been carefully considered. At the commencement of each voyage the Chief Steward, in consultation with the parents, draws up menus in accordance with the requirements but if any child needs a diet varying from that desired by the mothers, this can be readily obtained provided reasonable notice is given to the Chief Steward.

The arrangements for the berthing of nurse and amahs have also been brought into line with the latest ships.

Altogether, the difficulties of the mother travelling with one or more children have been removed as far as possible as well as adding to the comfort of the children themselves.

ROYAL MAIL REGROUPING

Moratorium Until End
Of 1934.

The scheme for the reorganisation of the Royal Mail Steam Packet group's affairs has again been before the Courts.

Mr. Justice Eve, in the Chancery Division sanctioned an arrangement providing the regrouping of the 15 companies comprising the group and securing a moratorium until the end of 1934. During that time the Treasury, or the Northern Ireland Government, should take no steps against the subsidiary companies to enforce payment in respect of secured loans or issues of securities which they have guaranteed, but may enforce payment out of the earnings of the Royal Mail Steam Packet Company itself.

Lone Voyage Leaves
Wellington.

Wellington.

As quietly and unostentatiously as he arrived, Mr. Fred Rebelle resumed his voyage from Sydney to Los Angeles, via Suva, Samoa and Tahiti. He arrived here in his small 18 ft. boat Elaine, without papers of any description and did not think it necessary to obtain any clearance when he left.

"I don't bother about these sort of things," he remarked. "I just come and go."

When Mr. Rebelle arrived at Suva after two months' voyage from Sydney he decided that one or two alterations would be desirable. He renewed the centreboard, which had been carried away, and covered in part of the stern of the boat with thickly-oiled material. After provisioning the little vessel he expressed himself as being well satisfied that she was in good shape to meet any rough weather. His confidence, however, is not shared by local seamen, who regard the venture as being particularly dangerous.

Before he left Rebelle collected a good supply of reading matter, particularly poetry, to which he is very partial. Asked when he expected to reach Los Angeles, he said he was not sure, adding that he was in no hurry and would just as soon spend the next two years between here and Los Angeles as anywhere else.

Very few people saw the tiny craft depart. As quietly as she arrived, the Elaine slipped out through the reef passage in the grey light of early morning. A white speck of sail-cloth held the eye for a brief space, then gradually merged into the vast expanse of blue sky and sapphire sea.

Long Ago Stories

Blodwen and the Good Stones

Blodwen was all alone. There had been a battle between the Romans and the Welsh, and Blodwen's people had been vanquished and those who remained carried away as captives. Blodwen had escaped to the mountains, and there she had lived all the Summer, eating the wild fruit. But when she felt the breath of winter in the air, she knew she must think out some plan for the future.

Blodwen began to dance in that dangerously narrow place.

"I will not go to the Romans," she thought. "I will walk across the mountains and see if the people are friendly on the other side."

She was only fourteen years old, but she was very brave. She had made herself a bow and some arrows, and she carried a sling and a bag of small round stones. Blodwen did not think it strange for a girl to fight in battle. She was wild as the winter winds, with her black hair all matted and her old sheep-skin flapping round her bare legs. She was not afraid of wolves or Romans, but she did not like the dangerous ledges on the mountain side where she thought the spirits lived.

Well, she walked all day, and at dusk she came upon a narrow path clinging to the side of a cruel rock, with a terrible dip down into a ravine and great stones scattered everywhere.

"Some terrible spirit dwells here," thought Blodwen, "but I must pass. What shall I do to make it kind to me? I will dance to it."

So she put her weapons on the ground, and, venturing a little way along the ledge, she began to dance in that dangerously narrow place.

"Kind spirits," she murmured as she danced, "but she thought they were very cruel, 'do not push me into the dark ravine below; do not throw a storm over me; see how badly I dance compared with you who have the grace of all the flames of fire, but I am only poor Blodwen at your mercy.'"

She danced for a long time, going as near to the edge of the path as she dared. And when she thought the spirit must be touched, she went to her skin bag and emptied out all the beautiful little round stones she had collected to use in her sling. They were good stones, and she loved them because they protected her; but so did the spirits, therefore she made a gift of them to that dangerous place.

"Take my good stones," she murmured.

Then she walked along that rough and terrible path. In the morning she reached the valley where Welsh people greeted her kindly. But they seemed puzzled, and asked her how she had dared to pass the abode of the mountain spirits.

"I danced to them, and gave them my good stones," she replied. "They let me pass safely."

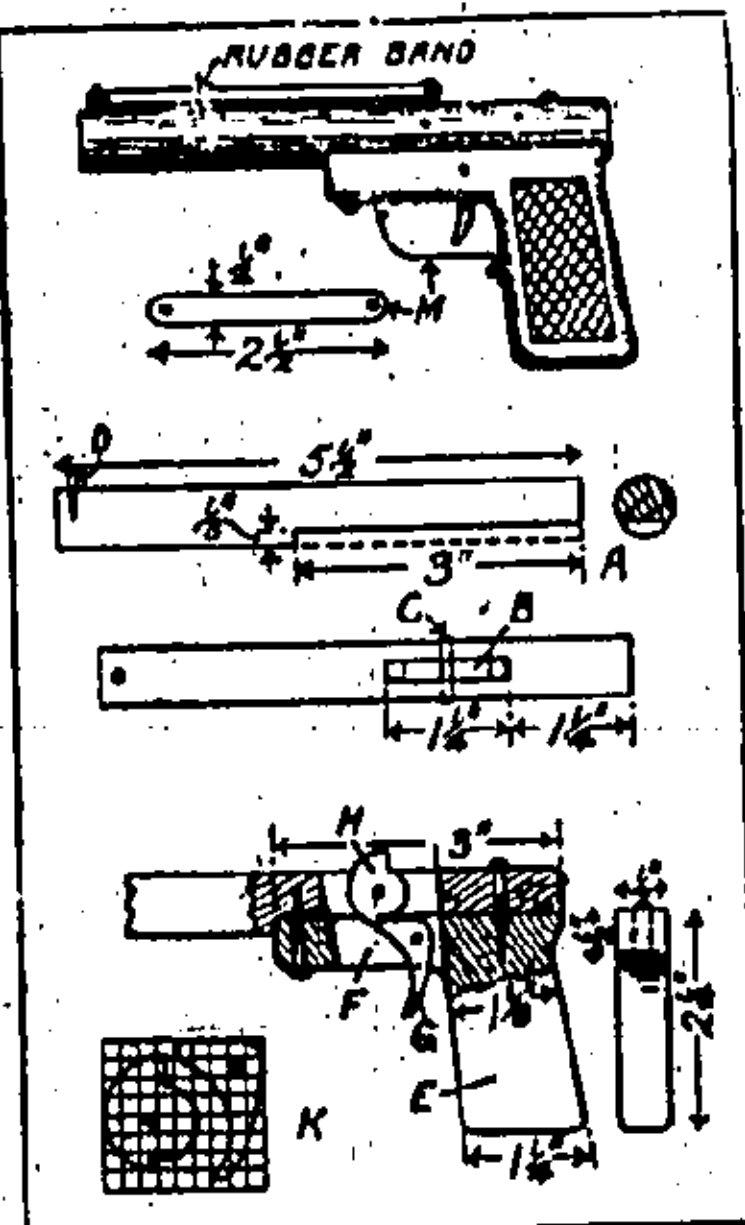

And even to-day there are mountain people who give stones to the spirits when they pass by dangerous places.

THE TINKITES' TOYSHOP.

Making a Toy Pistol.

Here is a novel toy pistol which is made chiefly from odd pieces of wood. As it only "fires" rubber bands, it is quite harmless.

For the barrel, cut a piece of five-eighths-inch dowel rod, five and a half inches long. For a distance of three inches from one end, chisel a flat part, as shown at A. Mark the position of the slot B, and cut this out by first making two holes with a bradawl and then removing the wood between with a fret-saw. Through the sides of the barrel, across the slot, bore a hole to take a pivot pin, C, which can be made from a smooth round nail with the end cut off. The foresight, D, is simply a small screw with the head cut off.

If you take a little trouble, and read Carpenter's instructions carefully, you can make a toy pistol like this. It only "fires" rubber bands.

Cut the butt, E, from a piece of half-inch wood, to the sizes given in the diagram. With a chisel and glass paper round off all the corners, with the exception of the two top edges where the wood fits against the barrel. Now cut out the slot F to the same width as the one in the barrel; screw the two parts together, as indicated, and smooth the insides of the slots with a thin file.

To make the trigger, G, and the catch-plate, H, obtain a small piece of oak, three-sixteenths of an inch thick and about one-and-a-half inches square, and mark it out in one-eighth-inch squares, as in diagram K. Care-

WHENCE CAME "WILD-GOOSE CHASE"?

You often use the expression: "Wild-goose Chase", but I wonder if you know WHY a chase that leads nowhere should be so called?

Actually, it has its meaning in the peculiar flight of wild geese who follow one another as children do in "follow-my-leader". But WE use the expression because, before the days of fox-hunting, horsemen used to elect a leader and then simply follow him—like wild-geese—one behind the other, wherever he cared to lead them.

Later, these horsemen, in search of an interesting game that would give them plenty of jumping, conceived the idea of chasing a steeple—that is to say, going straight across country in a bee-line towards some distant church steeple. From this game, of course, came our steeple-chases.

The difference between the steeple-chase and the wild-geese chase was that the former had a goal—the church-steeple—and the latter had no goal at all! The wild-geese game stopped as soon as the leader or his horse got tired.

Why not try a running steeple-chase instead of a paper-chase, or, better still, a wild-geese chase behind some chosen leader? It should be great fun!

fully mark the outlines of the two parts, and cut them out with a fret-saw after boring the two holes for the pivot pins.

The trigger and catchplate have to engage with each other as shown in the diagram, and they must be an easy fit in slot F. If they fit too tightly, rub the sides of each on glasspaper. Make sure that the holes in these parts are an easy fit for the pins, and then fix them in position so that the nose of the trigger just catches the little notch on the catchplate H. The trigger guard M, is made from a thin strip of tin bent to shape and screwed in place as shown in the top diagram.

To "load" the pistol, stretch a small rubber band (about one and a half inches long and one-eighth-inch wide) over the foresight D, and the nose of the catchplate, as shown in the top diagram. The pull of the rubber will keep the trigger set till it is pressed with the finger. This releases the catchplate and causes the rubber band to be shot forward with a catapult action.

WENDY'S LITTLE NEEDLEWOMEN.

The Red Indian Doll.

A Red Indian Doll will be a great attraction on the Bazaar Toy Stall. Use a dark brown stocking to make the doll, which is stuffed and put together just like the Chinese and Peasant dolls we told you about. Little "Laughing Water" should have jet-black wool hair, black shoe-button eyes, and nose and lips worked in red wool.

Laughing Water wears trousers and tunic of light brown material. The trousers are cut like Diagram B—you have to cut two pieces—and the sides and inner leg seams are joined together. Make a casing round the top, through which you can thread an elastic, and then cut up the ends of the trouser-legs, to fringe them in the true Red-skin fashion.

Another doll for the Bazaar stall—a Red Indian one this time. Dressmaker explains how it is made.

The tunic is cut Magyar-shape—like Diagram A, with little straight sleeves added each side. Join these on to the arm-holes, then join the side seams, and run a draw-thread round the neck. Fringe the ends of skirt and sleeves to match the trousers, put the garment on the doll, and pull the draw-thread up to fit the neck closely. Then, with some strings if gay beads, and a coloured band round her head, with a bright feather stuck in at the back, Laughing Water is nearly dressed.

Her tiny moccasins supply the finishing touch. If you wedge her stumpy toes into them, and secure them with a few stitches, they will keep on quite well. To make each shoe, cut a sole, like Diagram C, from felt, and then stitch a strip of one-inch wide coloured braid all round, like Diagram D. Join up the two little short edges at the back, and run a gathering-thread round the top. When you pull this up, like Diagram E, you'll find you have a pretty little shoe to complete Laughing Water's costume.

Wendy's Dressmaker.

THE FAIRY PIPER MAN.

Oh, sometimes in the dawning, when the World is very still, You can hear the softest music steal across the far-off Hill. So sweet and low, yet crystal-clear, it floats into the air, And you know the Fairy Piper-man is playing somewhere there!

McNab-Robertson Wins at A.A.A. Championships

SECOND BEST IN ENGLAND.

London, Yesterday.
D. McNab-Robertson (Mary Hill Harriers) to-day came very near to breaking H. Green's English record for the Marathon when he clocked 2 hours 34 minutes 32.3/5 seconds for the 25-Miles distance at the Amateur Athletic Association Championships at the White City Stadium. Green's figures are 5 minutes 3.1/5 seconds better than the Mary Hill Harrier's effort, but McNab-Robertson's time stands as the second best in the British Isles.

It was only on June 27 that Paavo Nurmi broke Green's record by covering the distance in 2 hours, 22 minutes, 4 seconds, clipping off 7 minutes 25.2/5 seconds from the world record!—Reuter.

THEFT FROM POLICE SERGEANT.

Returned Banishee Jailed.

Tsang On, a returned banishee, was sentenced to ten months' hard labour by Mr. W. Schofield in the Central Police Court this morning, for the theft of $240 from Sergeant Bowers, of the Shaokwan Police Station. At the time of the theft, Sergeant Bowers was staying with Mr. and Mrs. J. Polson at their residence at Stanley Terrace, Taikeo. Inspector Stimson prosecuted.

In the early hours of yesterday morning, Mr. Polson was awakened by a noise. He found the defendant crouching at the foot of his bed, in front of a settee. Defendant had gained entrance by climbing up the rear drainpipe, through a verandah, through the sitting room and into the bedroom. The thief was taken to Shaokwan Police Station where he admitted the theft.

Nanking, Yesterday.
The Government is taking drastic steps to curb the student riots. Troops early this morning forcibly entered the Central University and arrested the students responsible for the attack on the University's chancellor.

The students have been ordered to leave the University pending its re-organisation and the faculty have been relieved of their posts.—Reuter.

CANTON CHOLERA ON THE WANE.

Government's Prompt Measures.

Mr. Ho Lok, Commissioner of Public Safety for Canton, stated yesterday that cholera was on the wane.

In spite of prompt measures enforced by the Government in respect of restrictions prohibiting the sale of cut fruit, unboiled beverages, and ice cream, the cholera spread to Hong Kong, 16 cases being treated at the Tung Wah Hospital on Tuesday last.

The Commissioner expressed the hope that the Government would encourage vaccination, or carry out free vaccination for the poor classes, so as to check the spread of the epidemic.

MR. JOHN LEE.

Former Member of Police Force.

OLD CHINA HAND.

There passed away in the Matilda Hospital, Mount Kellett yesterday morning, one of the oldest British residents of the China Coast, in the person of Mr. John Lee, at the age of 89 years. He joined the Hong Kong Police Force in 1864, rising to the rank of Inspector, and was latterly custodian of the Colony's recreation grounds, retiring from that post in 1923.

Mr. Lee was born on December 27, 1843, in Lincolnshire, England. He went to sea at an early age, and in 1863 came to China as a sailor in a barque of the British Borneo Co. bound for Shanghai. He arrived in Shanghai just before Christmas, having taken eight months on the voyage. The sailing vessel was then trading along the coast of China to Manila and Bangkok.

On August 10, 1864, Mr. Lee, joined the Hong Kong Police, remaining in the force until 1869. Then he was employed by a local firm dealing in sugar, which firm was absorbed by the China Sugar Refining Co.

In 1817 he joined the Police again, and was promoted to Inspector, retiring in 1892, on pension. In 1915 he was appointed custodian of the recreation grounds of Hong Kong.

Mr. Lee, was married in Hong Kong, and had a son who served in England and France during the war. He died in Canton six years ago while in the Asiatic Petroleum Co.

Deceased had been to England only twice since he came out; the first time on the occasion of the Jubilee of Queen Victoria, and the second time in 1923. He was an active and energetic man, spending his leisure time in poultry keeping and gardening.

Mr. Lee's parents died very old, also his many brothers and sisters; he was one of the youngest of his family.

The burial took place yesterday evening in the Roman Catholic cemetery, Happy Valley.

DARING ROBBERY AT TAI PO.

Three Chinese Rob Foki of $212.

VICTIMS BOUND.

Stopping a motor lorry, driven by a shop foki, Nagi Yau, 38, accompanied by a coolie, three Chinese, posing as searchers for contraband, robbed the driver of $212.

The foki, an employee of the Shan Hing Lung Co., pig dealers, was driving to the Tai Po market to buy pigs. Proceeding along Tai Po Road at about 4.40 a.m. this morning, near the three-and-one-half mile post, he saw three men standing electric torch ordered him to halt. Explaining that they were searching for contraband, they ordered him and his companion to come off the lorry. Upon alighting, a pointed knife and a quantity of wire was produced.

Binding their victims with the wire under threat of the knife, they robbed the foki of his jacket containing $212 ($100 in big money and $100 in ten cent pieces). The money was the property of his master. His purse, containing $12, was also taken. Throwing the two behind some bushes at the side of the road, the trio of robbers then disappeared in the direction of Shum Shui Po.

YEN, QUO AND KOO HONOURED.

Ambassadorships Awarded.

Nanking, Yesterday.
The Nanking Central Political Council, in conjunction with the Executive Yuan, to-day announced the promotion of Messrs. W. W. Yen (Minister to U.S.A.) and Quo Tai-chi (Minister to Great Britain) as Ambassadors. Official circles consider the appointment of Mr. Wellington Koo as Ambassador to France a matter of time.

The promotions were made following the three veteran Chinese officials' meritorious services to the Nanking Government in connection with their handling of the Sino-Japanese negotiations both in Shanghai and Geneva. The trio will represent Nanking in the League of Nations Convention in September when the Lytton Commission's report will be submitted for the Powers' consideration.

Nanking believes that owing to the delays during the League Commission's tour in Manchuria, their report may not be ready for Geneva until September and on this account the League Assembly may have to be postponed until November.—Reuter.

COMMUNIST WARS.

Nanking, Yesterday.
Reports of Government victories in the anti-Communist campaign are still coming in, the latest success being the capture of Hoshan, in West Anhui. The Government troops are now besieging the Communist headquarters at Hochia, the capitulation of which is momentarily expected.—Reuter.
